“ He was such a loving caring kind hearted man. If he loved you he would do anything for you or even if he just meet you really. He was allergic to the word even if he said no a hour later he would be putting on his shoes kissing you on the cheek and saying that magic word Okay.

He just wanted the simple things in life everyday he would wake up make some rice eggs and sausage and I mean every morning that was on the menu ha ha ha and he gotta have his coffee. Every morning I would wake up with breakfast in bed and a story. He would always have a new story or adventure to tell me.

And I would be like it's only 11:00 am all this happened ha ha ha and I loved it. We would sit down eat breakfast while watching The Price Is Right and it was really fun to. I would be jumping up and down on the couch he would be yelling out answers you would think we was on the show. I use to sometimes think he was psychic because we would be watching The Price Is Right and he would just throw out a random number and that number would be the answer to the question.

Needless to say he loved his game shows. He was always on the move trying to make stuff happen and get things done so when he came home he can stay home and just relax.

He loved being around his family his biggest wish was for his family to come together and have more family functions and parties so he can beat everybody in spades and make everybody laugh and test your patience a little but that's Tyree.

Life was never boring when your with Tyree his energy was always felt when he walked in the room. I mean he changed the whole temperature when he step in. If he happy you feel it if he upset you feel it if he's concerned you know it. He was my friend he was my man he was my fiancé and my world feels so cold and empty without my other half. But I know he wants me to live laugh and love and that's what I'm going to do. Love you forever and ever Tyree

Peace
