“ Uncle Charles was more like a grandfather to my siblings and I. Uncle Charles' brother, James Edward Peoples, was my grandfather. He died exactly one week before I was born. From then on, Uncle Charles assumed the role of an honorary grandfather role in our lives. From taking time, teaching me how to cast a fishing rod in the backyard, giving me age old secrets about lawn care, letting me practice on his lawn when I was ready to start my lawn care service, picking us up on half-days of school, and teaching us many valuable lessons about life; he showed his unconditional love to us. Uncle Charles is the only person who has ever given me an official nickname. His legacy is important and lives through those who truly loved him, and those whom he truly loved! He was a man's, man! He loved family, and he was a strong minded individual. I remember sitting on the porch, listening to his stories about his childhood in Alabama. How could a man who faced, extreme circumstances, lift himself up by his own bootstraps? He is a true testament that as men, we need to step up to the plate, own our mistakes, take care of our responsibilities, love deeply, give generously, and leave the rest up to God. Uncle Charles will be deeply missed. I'm confident that in his final hours with just he and our Lord, he would say, in the words of the songwriter, "when I look back, all of my good days outweigh my bad days.." Get your rest Chub! Love, Chub-Chub!
