“ *God saw you getting tired
And a cure was not to be
So he put His arms around you
And whispered “Come to me.”
With tearful eyes we watched you
As you slowly slipped away
And though we cared for you dearly
We couldn’t make you stay.
Your golden heart stopped beating
Your tired hands put to rest
God broke our hearts to prove to us
He only takes the best.*

“ Mr. Curtis Speights was the gold standard for me when it comes to principals/leaders in education. He was firm and fair. He knew generations of families coursing through his halls, and knew them by name. Always open to conversations with parents about their individual students, but most of all he was kind. I always looked forward to having African American male teachers, principals, college professors because I believed that they could be cut from the same cloth as Mr. Speights. Rest well, Mr. Speights, you have definitely fought the good fight, and you are well deserving of your reward.
