“ St. John Street and Alabama Ave were more than just mere connections to parts of the 'hood. They were truly a life line and cross roads to an industry that fed the world some of its most beautiful automobiles during peace time and the most devastating war machinery (Tanks) during World War II. Many a person (Men and Women) found their way to and fro out of their homes along these avenues in support their nation in a peace and war. Thank you "Doris", as a studious support person early on and later a dominate matriarchal influence in the growth of Flint.
