“ Jasmine, i remember the 1st time we met. We was in elementary. You was shy and laid back but also not fearful ... you came up to me playing w/my ears and i also remember people saying we looked alike lol. We was friends from there always doing kid stuff and being bad as well but it was innocent. We grew up closer and closer when we got about hmm 18 we lost contact but you was always there to support me. We always communicate through FB or SC And you was always still the jas i knew from beginning. I will miss you so much. RIH.

“ Jasmine and I went to school together. She would always crack jokes about our teacher coughing and play with people ears. She kept a smile on her face and made sure everyone was okay. I will miss my friend. She the most courageous person I know. I love you jasmine. Rest up baby

“ Jasmine was my friend and her death really took a toll on me like i haven't felt this way since my brother passed when i was nine. I cried for days, anxiety was through the roof. Simply because of the talks we had and how we both expressed how scared we were to each other because we had lupus. My feelings are so hurt because i kept telling her like you got this you're gonna beat it! You're strong 🦵 we're strong. Crazy part is if you know jasmine you know she's always goofy and just could brighten anyone's mood every time i checked on her i would say "how you doing boo how you feeling?" She would respond "I'm dying" with a bunch of laughing emojis and just joke about death all around talking about people better not crop me in them clouds ☁️ 🦋😭😭 she always kept me laughing. I've been knowing this girl since middle school bro , grew a bond with her in high school we been cool every since. When i found out i had lupus and was in the hospital two months she checked on me EVERY SINGLE DAY never skipped a beat !!! If you have someone that you love but haven't talked to or checked on DO IT NOW because you never know when will be your last time talking to them. 🦋👤 real reason i was beating myself up about this whole situation is because i felt like i lied to her when i told her she would beat it but truth is ... YOU REALLY BEAT LUPUS JAS !! It's me the one down here still fighting 😞 but don't worry I'm going to fight a good fight for both of us 🦵🦋👤💜 #prayers4thefamily #foreverJAS #iloveyou
