She had no care as to how much money she had in her pocket, but took pleasure in shopping at the local dollar stores especially Family Dollar. Her very petite size allowed her to find clothes anywhere. She liked showing off those cute little clothes and tiny shoes that matched every outfit she had. She enjoyed adding to and showing off her large collection of lighters, many were cute and quaint others on the side of being a little risqué'. She enjoyed spending time with her babies, playing pokeno and cards and somehow managing to be the winner each time. “ My deepest sympathy goes to you family during your time of sorrow. Lou and I went to school together. I always admired her for her smile and she always knew how to dress. So family she's gone to a better place in my father's house. Take comfort in knowing that she will always be in our hearts. With sincere sympathy. Sandra Brown Copeland and family.
