“ *To the entire family of Ms. Lady V,
You all have my deepest sympathy. I loved this Lady so much, she was/is a beautiful strong black woman. She has endured so much over the last several years that I know her body had to be tired. I will love her forever and I will never ever forget her.
To Rose, Bonn, Nicky, Donnie, and Deborah, you all have memories of your mom and they won't go away until you erase them. I know I have memories that I will cherish forever. Ms. Lady V, which is what I called her, has been freed. Free from all the pain that she had to endure, free from worrying, just free. She's riding with the big dawgs now. As sad as I am knowing I'm going to miss her, I'm happy for her, her burdens are over, her pain is all gone she left her memories to carry us on. R.I.P. Ms. Lady V*
